On Saturday night the two met at to advance the interests of Plattsthe bar in a Douglas street resort, mouth. and Nugent abused Barnes quite severely, telling him that he could whip him even if he had stood up before Paddy Ryan. The proprietor interfered to prevent trouble, and the two were about to adjourn to the alley for a fight when their respective friends solzed and separated them. This, of course, added to the feeling between the men, and Barnes sent a friend to Nugent offering to make him a present of $100 if he would stand up before him for three rounds-Queenabury rules, and allowing Nu gent to name the time and place. The latter accepted the challenge

Nugent wanted the money put up in a certain hands yesterday, and as that was done it may be accepted as a fact that the fight will take place, as neither will be satisfied until the rivalry has been settled by a set-to in the ring. If the rules are adhered to this may be all right, but if not the authorities should interfere and not allow the matter to go any further. Both are good men but after the trouble they have already had there must be more or less revenge in the contest. There will naturally be a large crowd on hands and serious trouble may occur if no restraining influence is exercised. Omaha has been condemned enough already on account of these pugilistic encounters without the

The order of services was duly held, and Bishop Clarkson performed the ceremony of laying the corner-stone with great impressiveness.

A hymn, "Faith, Hope, Charity," composed by Rev. H. B. Burgess, of Plattsmouth, for the occasion, was then sung.

Rav. James Paterson, A. M, de livered the address. Speaking of the laying of corner stones as a ceremony, and of its significance, he dwelt upon the language of architecture, and pointed out what this beautiful building would express.
